

John H. Dailey

John H. Dailey is Chief of Police at Duke University in Durham, North Carolina. He grew up in Durham and holds a Bachelor of Science Degree in Business from Wake Forest University, a Master of Public Administration Degree from North Carolina State University, and a graduate certificate in Community Preparedness and Emergency Management from the University of North Carolina in Chapel Hill. He also graduated from the Senior Management Institute for Police, conducted by the Police Executive Research Forum.

After college, John served as a Captain in the United States Army. He then worked for the Duke University Police Department where he served in a variety of sworn positions. In 2001, he joined the North Carolina State University Police Department as Deputy Director. In 2009, Dailey returned to the Duke Police Department as Chief of Police. The Duke University Police Department is responsible for security and police operations at Duke University and Duke University Hospital.

John has done a lot of work with Dr. Steve Straus at North Carolina State University to hire officers using “emotional intelligence” criteria. This is an increasingly important area in recruiting and hiring excellent employees.