

Angelica Wedell

NRC Marketing Manager Angelica Wedell has worked in multimedia communications for nearly ten years and is an Online Marketing Certified Professional (OMCP). She enjoys leading the digital communications efforts and strategies of National Research Center, Inc. (NRC), networking and speaking professionally at conferences across the country, writing popular guest articles for syndicates like ELGL (Engaging Local Government Leaders), contributing to and editing NRC's monthly newsletter, The Civil Review.

Angelica demonstrates a strong passion for storytelling and journalistic integrity in her writing. She plans to continue creating quality content in the form of video production, photography and web writing. "NRC has given me the highly sought yet seldom found opportunity to get paid to do what I truly love," Angelica said. "By telling the world about NRC's services, I feel like I'm helping communities become better places to live. I staunchly believe that these surveys and evaluative services are absolutely needed, especially for local governments that value transparency, data-based decision-making and the quality of life of their everyday citizens."
